THE SECRET DESTINY OF AMERICA

Buried Love-Truth
resurrected.

Dear Friends:

n December 2, 1942 I gave my lecture on the Secret Destiny of America in Carnegie Hall, New York City. The country was under severe stress and we had the largest single audience of my speaking career--something over 2500, including a number of prominent persons and the official hostess of the City of New York. The lecture was well received and was given a favorable press. The script of this lecture has been available for over forty-five years.

It became obvious to me that a grand plan was unfolding itself through the centuries. Solon, the Greek law giver was instructed by Egyptian priests in the laws and principles upon which an enduring civilization could be built. Centuries earlier, Akhenaton, pharaoh of Egypt made his contribution to essential progress. He was a mystic given to visions and emphasized clearly that rulers should be the benefactors of their people, considering the good of the whole above personal ambitions. He has been called "the first democratic thinker," and gave the franchise to all citizens, men, women, and children alike.

With the collapse of classical civilization the Great Plan was perpetuated in secret, but with the advent of Christopher Columbus many important facts came to light. He was not a poor sailor, but a scholar who admitted that he had received instruction from Asiatic teachers, was given to mystical visions, and, when he died, he was buried in a Franciscan frock although there was no evidence that he belonged to that order.

The prophet, Nostradamus, who has been described as a man who was never wrong, said that after the end of the twentieth century a great environment of peace, justice, and integrity would come to the world and the Paraclete, the Prince of Peace, would govern all things.

The contributions of Lord Bacon to this program of essential progress will be largely the subject of the present occasion, nor should Benjamin Franklin be ignored, nor Thomas Jefferson-- the three strong supports of a new nation. At this time also Sir William Hope correctly named and dated the signing of the Declaration of Independence and the assassination of Lincoln. The name of the speaker whose words hastened the signing of the Declaration of Independence is unknown. One sentence is typical of the inspired address, "As I live, my friends, I believe that to be His voice! Yes, were my soul trembling on the verge of eternity, were this hand freezing in death, were this voice choking in the last struggle, I would still, with the last impulse of that soul, with the last wave of that hand, with the last gasp of that voice, implore you to remember this truth-- God has given America to be free."

Perhaps one of the most astonishing incidents was a vision given to General McClellan. George Washington's spirit appeared to him warning that the plan decided upon by General McClellan would have ended in a tragic defeat. The General revised his program to conform with Washington's recommendation, and some believe that this occurrence alone saved the union.

These, and many other circumstances, are available to thoughtful students and scholars concerned with those eternal facts which shaped the lives of both individuals and nations.

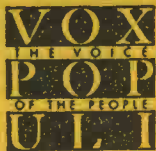

Feeling the importance of bringing idealistic information to the attention of young people wandering in an abyss of uncertainty, our very good friends, Judson and Nadine Harriss, suggested that a simplified version of THE SECRET DESTINY OF AMERICA would be appropriate and useful. Needless to say I encouraged in every way possible this project with the result that we have a most attractive new item appropriate to children from eight to ninety years of age. Mr. Harriss has condensed the substance of my volume into a highly readable little book, published under the title THE MAGIC FIRE. It has been given a number of appropriate illustrations by Drummond Riddell. In many respects THE MAGIC FIRE is a complete work in itself with strong inspirational and aspirational contributions to the long and troublous history of the United States. Friend Harriss has made a strong case for Bacon's place in the plan, but has also devoted space to the development of democracy in the Western hemisphere before the colonization of European powers.

As we read of those many achievements which have contributed to the nation we know today, let us also be mindful of those un-honored heroes who also gave their full measure of devotion. Many were tortured to death in secret dungeons for daring to hope for a better life for all humanity. Some died on the executioner's block, others were foully murdered and the stories of their lives purposely distorted to conceal the unpopular truth that human beings had the inalienable right for life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. From all corners of the world they have come searching here for those sacred rights to which all who are born are the proper beneficiaries.

It is most timely and appropriate that a very pleasant evening will occur at the Sheraton Miramar Hotel on the evening of Tuesday, August 4. On this occasion Vox Populi as sponsored by the Veritat Foundation, Inc. will unite in a tribute to Marie Bauer Hall whose researches and excavations at Williamsburg, Virginia in 1938 resulted in the discovery of the Great Virginia Vault which contains the proof of America's secret destiny. To the accomplishment of this particular end Vox Populi has been established as the voice of the people which alone has the authority to reveal the contents to the people of America.

The sponsors of this event are inviting individuals and organizations dedicated to supporting the secret destiny of America to unite for this important event and Marie Bauer Hall's lifetime dedication to the accomplishment of the release of secret information which has been buried in the Virginia earth for 350 years.

While it is not noted on the program, appropriate entertainment is planned including speakers and exhibits. Those attending are assured a deeply inspiring evening when matters seldom publicly discussed are given meaningful foundation for our nation and the building of a new future in which labor we may all take part.

You are cordially invited to a Banquet

"dress informal, but chic"

In my publication AMERICA'S ASSIGNMENT WITH DESTINY first published in 1951 special consideration is given to the contributions of the Virginia Company. The following quotation is highly significant. William Hepworth Dixon of the Inner Temple, writing in 1861, makes several important observations on the settlement of the New World. In one place he writes, "In no History of America, in no Life of Bacon, have I found one word to connect him with the plantation of that great Republic. Yet, like Raleigh and Delaware, he takes an active share in the labours, a conspicuous part in the sacrifices through which the foundations of Virginia and the Carolinas are first laid. Like men of far less note, who have received far higher honours in America, Bacon pays his money into the great Company, and takes office in its management as one of the Council. To his other glories therefore must be added that of a Founder of New States. . . .

"All generous spirits rush to the defense of Virginia. Bacon joins the Company with purse and voice. Montgomery, Pembroke, and Southampton join it. . . .A fleet, commanded by Gates and Somers, sails from the Thames, to meet on its voyage at sea those singular and poetic storms and trials which add the Bermudas to our empire and The Tempest to our literature. . . .

"One hundred and seventy-five years after Walter Raleigh laid down his life in Palace Yard for America, his illustrious blood paid for by Gondomar in Spanish gold, the citizens of Carolina, framing for themselves a free constitution, remembered the man to whose genius they owed their existence as a state. They called the capital of their country 'Raleigh.' The United States can also claim among their muster roll of Founders the no less noble name of Francis Bacon. Will the day come, when, dropping such feeble names as Troy and Syracuse, the people of the Great Republic will give the august and and immortal name of Bacon to one of their splendid cities?"

It might be remembered that Captain John Smith, an old soldier who had fought in many fields, made a considerable contribution to the preservation of Transylvania from the ravages of the Turks, said to be the birthplace of the Comte St.-Germain.

We may give a few words of tribute to Simon Bolivar, the liberator of Latin America. He died at forty-seven in exile under a strange roof and clad in a borrowed nightshirt. Bolivar said in 1823, "America is the highest and most irrefutable assignment of destiny. The nations I have founded will, after prolonged and bitter agony, go into an eclipse, but will later emerge as stations of the one great republic, AMERICA."

Always most sincerely,

Mandy P. Hall
